ما زال العلماء منذ ظهور الإسلام حق يومنا يهتمون بالشعر القديم وينقدونه ، ويحفظونه ، ويشروحونه ، ويقلّدونه ، والرسالة التي أقدّم لها تمثل لونا من هذا الاهتمام . فقد تضمنت آراء الأصمعيّ ، العالم والناقد واللغويّ والراوية ، في فحولة طائفة من الشعراء الجاهليين والإسلاميين ، رواها عنه تلميذه أبو حاتم سهل ابن محمد بن عثمان السجزي ، ورواها عن أبي حاتم تلميذه ابن دريد اللغوي .

لا نجد في الرسالة تفسيراً واضحاً لمعنى « فحولة » الشاعر . فقد سأل أبو حاتم أستاذه الأصمعيّ عن معنى « الفحل » ، فقال : من كان له مزية على غيره ، كمزية الفحل على الحِقاق . (ج . حقّ ، من الإبل ، الداخلة في السنة الرابعة) . على أننا نجد في اللسان ما يلي : « فحولة الشعراء هم الذين غلبوا بالهجاء من هاجاهم ، مثل جرير والفرزدق وأشباههما ، وكذلك كل من عارض شاعراً فغلب عليه » . لكن هذا التعريف يبدو ناقصاً ، لأننا نجد الأصمعيّ في رسالته يصف بعض الشعراء بالفحولة لغير ما ذكره « اللسان » . فقد قال إن « طَفَيْلًا فحلّ » لأنه غايةٌ ، في النعت وإن كعب بن سعد الغنوي ليس من الفحول إلا في المراثية ، فإنه ليس في الدنيا مثلها ، وإن لبيداً ليس بفحل ، وإن شعره كأنه طيلسان طبري ، يعني أنه جيد الصنعة وليست له حلاوة ، وإن الحويدرة لو قال خمس قصائد مثل قصيدته كان فحلاً ... ، ومن هذا نرى أن الأصمعيّ كان ينظر في الفحولة إلى جودة السبك ، وبراعة المعنى ، ووقرة الشعر معاً .

وتبدو قيمة الرسالة في أنها جمعت عدداً كبيراً من الشعراء الجاهليين والإسلاميين ، وأن الأصمعيّ نفسه كان له شأن كبير ، نظراً لمكانته في تاريخنا اللغوي والأدبي .

وُلد الأصمعيّ - وهو عبد الملك بن قسْرَيْب بن عبد الملك . . . بن أصمّ ، وإليه نسبته - في البصرة سنة ثلاث وعشرين ومائة من الهجرة . وكانت البصرة يومئذٍ مَجْمَع العلماء والشعراء والأدباء . فلما شبَّ أخذ القراءات واللغة والأدب على أبي عمرو بن العلاء ، أحد القراء السبعة . وأخذ عن طائفة العلماء منهم الخليل ابن أحمد الفراهيدي ، والإمام جعفر الصادق ، وحماد عجرد ، وحماد بن سلمة ، وحماد بن زيد وهما محدثان ، وخلف الأحمر ، وسفيان بن عُيَيْنَةَ ، وآخرون . ولقي عدداً كبيراً من الشعراء الفصحاء ، وأولادهم ، وسمع منهم أشعارهم . ثم إنه عُنِيَ بأمر لم يُعْنَ به أحدٌ مثله هو السماع من الأعراب ، وأهل البادية ، فكان يحفظ ما يسمعه منهم . فاجتمع له من رواية الشعر ما لم يجتمع لغيره ، وكان يفخر بهذه الميزة التي أوتيها . وكان يملك إلى ذلك كله ، عدداً ضخماً من الكتب ، يُطالع فيها . خرج مرة مع الرشيد إلى الرقة فحمل معه ثمانية عشر صندوقاً من الكتب ، وذكر أنه خفّف الحمل ، ولو ثقّله لحمل أضاف ذلك . وهذا يدلّ على ما كان عنده من الكتب .

اشتهر الأصمعيّ بروايته الواسعة ، ومعرفته بالشعر ونقدم ، وبالتفسير والحديث والنحو ، وكذلك اشتهر بحفظه وقوة ذاكرته ، وعُرف عنه الذكاء واستحضار الحجّة ، وخفة الروح ، وظرفُ النادرة ، وحلاوةُ المزاج ، ولذعُ التهكّم . وقد امتلأت كتب أدبنا العربي بالرواية عنه ، أو ذكر أخباره ، حتى ما تكاد تلقى كتاباً من المصادر الكبيرة ، لا ذكرَ له فيها . لقد كان من العلماء النوادِر الذين أغنوا الأدب العربي ، وساعدوا على توضيح معالِمه .

ألّف الاصمعيّ كتباً كثيرة ، أورد صاحب الفهرست مسرداً بها^(١) ، وفتاته بعضها ، وهذا بيان ما جمعناه من أسماء مؤلفاته :

(١) الفهرست (ط. أوروبا) ص ٥٥ - ٥٦ .

والمعجب أن رسالة «فحولة الشعراء» لم يذكروها صاحب الفهرست، ولا الذين كتبوا عن الأصمعي في عصرنا، كعز الدين التنوخي، والزركلي، وكحالة، وسركيس، مع أنها طُبعت منذ أمد طويل. وهي ذات شأن كبير، وتستحق الدراسة العميقة.

وقد كان المستشرق تشارلس تورّي قد نشر هذه الرسالة في عام ١٩١١ في المجلد ٦٥ من مجلة جمعية المستشرقين الألمان. مع ترجمة إنكليزية، ويبدو أن أبناء العربية لم يطلعوا عليها، ولم يفيدوا منها في دراساتهم عن الشعر القديم.

والمستشرق تورّي كان أستاذاً في جامعة ييل Yale بالولايات المتحدة، وقد نشر عدداً من النصوص العربية، منها «فتوح مصر وإفريقية والمغرب» لابن عبد الحكم، و«اغلاط الضعفاء» لابن برّي، وفحولة الشعراء للأصمعي، وغير ذلك، وتوفى سنة ١٩٤٨ هـ، وكان مولده سنة ١٨٦٣ م.

روى هذه الرسالة كتابةً عن الأصمعي تلميذه أبو حاتم السجستاني، وهو سهل ابن محمد. كان من كبار علماء البصرة باللغة والشعر. وقد نحى نحو أستاذه الأصمعي في مؤلفاته الكثيرة، وكان ثقة. توفى سنة ٢٤٨ هـ. وكان من تلاميذه ابن دريد اللغوي المتوفى سنة ٣٢١ هـ، وهو الذي روى عنه رسالتنا هذه. فتكون الرسالة قد وصلت إلينا بطريق عالين كبيرين ثقتين عن الأصمعي.

كتاب فحول الشعراء

رواية ابن ذرير عن أبي حاتم عن الأصمعي

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم قال أبو بكر محمد بن الحسن بن
ذرير الأزدى قال أبو حاتم سهل بن محمد بن عثمان السجزي
سمعت الأصمعي عبد الملك بن قريب غير¹⁾ مرة يفضل النابغة
الذبياني على سائر شعراء²⁾ للجاهلية وسألته آخر ما سألته قبيل
موته من أول الفحول قال النابغة الذبياني ثم قال ما أرى في الدنيا
لأحد مثل قول امرئ القيس

وَقَاعَمَ جَدَّهُمْ بِنِي أَبِيهِمْ وَيَالْأَشَقِيْنَ مَا كَانَ الْعِقَابُ³⁾

قال أبو حاتم فلما رأيت أنكب كلامه فكرت ثم قال بل أولهم
كلهم في الجودة امرؤ القيس له الخطوة والسبق وكلهم أخذوا من
قوله وأتبعوا مذهبه وكأنته جعل النابغة الذبياني من الفحول قال
أبو حاتم قلت ما معنى الفحل قال يريد أن له مزينة على غيره
كمزينة الفحل على الحفان قال وبيت جرير يدلك على هذا

وَأَبْنُ اللَّبُونِ إِذَا مَا نَزَا⁴⁾ فِي قَرَانٍ لَمْ يَسْتَضِعْ صَوْلَةَ أَنْبَزِلِ الْقِنَاعِيْسِ⁵⁾
قال أبو حاتم وسأله رجل أي الناس طراً أشعر قال النابغة قال
تقدم عليه أحدا قال لا ولا أدركت العلماء بالشعر يفضلون عليه
أحدا قلت فزهير بن أبي سلمى قد اختلف فيه وفيهما⁶⁾ ثم قال
لا قال أبو عمرو وسأله رجل وأنا اسمع النابغة أشعر أم زهير فقال
ما يصلح زهير أن يكون أجيراً للنابغة قال [و] أوس⁶⁾ بن حجر أشعر²⁰⁾

قال ابو حاتم حدثنا الاصمعي قال حدثنا شيخ من اهل نجد
قال كان طُفَيْلُ الْعَنْوَرِي يَسْمَى فِي الْجَاهِلِيَّةِ مُحْبِرًا لِحَسَنِ شَعْرِهِ قَالَ
وطفيل عندي في بعض شعره اشعر من امرئ القيس الاصمعي يقوله
ثم قال وقد اخذ طفيل من امرئ القيس شيئاً قال ويقال ان كثيراً
10 من شعر امرئ القيس لصعاليك كانوا معه قال وكان عمرو بن قميئة⁴⁾
دخل معه الروم الى قيصر قال وكان معوية بن ابي سفيان يقول
دعوا لي طفيلاً فان شعره اشبه بشعر الأولين من زهير وهو فحل
ثم قال من العجب ان النابغة لم ينعت فرساً قط بشيء الا قوله

صُفْرًا مَنَاحِرُهَا مِنَ الْجَرَّارِ⁵⁾

15 قال ولم يكن النابغة وأوس وزهير يحسنون صفة الخيل ولكن طفيل
غاية في النعت وهو فحل ثم انشد له

1) In the Ms. there is no sign of a gap here, nor does any one appear to have noticed it. It is plain that from speaking of Ṭufail's description of horses al-Aṣma'ī then passed on to speak of his acknowledged rival in this regard, Nābigha Ja'dī. The place where the omission occurred must be the one which I have indicated, and it may be that the text has suffered the loss of only a line or two.

2) The verse appears to come from the long qaṣīda of this poet of which small portions are given in Agh. IV, 130 f., Hiz. I, 513 f., and elsewhere, while 70 or 80 verses from it appear in the Jamhara, 145 ff. A similar verse (but not the same) is Jamh. 147, 4.

The curse of Allah is upon this phrase of his, because he thought it excellent:

Praise to Allah, the bountiful giver.

Al-Aṣma'ī said, moreover: Al-Kumait ibn Zaid was not normative 5 (كُؤَيْمِ), because he was an Arab only by adoption; the same was true of aṭ-Ṭirimmāḥ. Dū 'r-Rumma was normative, for he was a bedawī. His poetry, however, is not like the poetry of the true Arabs; excepting (he added) one poem in which he resembles them; that one, namely, in which he says:

10

And on Abū Ghassān the door is barred.

ancient poet in the Jāhiliya, and yet Kalb was four times as good as Saibān.

Said Abū Ḥātim: We have the following from al-Aṣma'ī. Some one asked of Ḥassān: Whom do you call foremost in poetry? He answered: (fol. 10) Do you mean What man? or What tribe? I meant the tribe. Ḥudail is the foremost, he replied. (Said al-Aṣma'ī: There were in that tribe forty notable poets. They were all men who ran on foot, not one of them was a knight.) Said Abū Ḥātim: I asked al-Aṣma'ī: What one man, then, was the foremost of the poets? He replied: Ḥassān did not express his opinion as to the individual, but I will give mine. The one greatest of them all was an-Nābigha of Ḍubyan, when he was fifty years of age. Nor did he compose much poetry. As for an-Nābigha al-Ja'dī, on the other hand, the flow of his poetry was stopped for thirty years after his first productive period, and then the stream flowed again. The poetry of his first period was extremely good, but all his later productions were unoriginal (مسرّوق) and of poor quality. (Said Abū Ḥātim: He began composing poetry when he was thirty years old; then he ceased for thirty years; then the flow was renewed for thirty years more.) I said to al-Aṣma'ī: How about the poetry of al-Farazdaq? He replied: Nine tenths of his poetry was borrowed. As for Jarīr, he composed thirty qaṣida's, and I do not know that he ever plagiarized anything except one half-verse.¹⁾ According to Abū Ḥātim, al-Aṣma'ī said: I think that Jamīl ibn Ma'mar was born of a slave mother; 25 he flourished in Qubā' until his old age.

This from al-Aṣma'ī: Some one once said of Kuṭayyir that he was a small shop selling thread and tar. Said al-Aṣma'ī: Abū Du'aib was an excellent authority, and many instances of exceptional usage were based on his poetry.²⁾ He (al-Aṣma'ī) admired this jim-poem by Abū Du'aib; No one in the world, he said, could equal aš-Šammāḥ in his poems in zāy and jim except Abū Du'aib, who in his poem in jim reached such a limit of excellence as no other could equal; namely, in the poem containing the words:

The kneeling camel herd of Juḍām.

Said al-Aṣma'ī: an-Namir ibn Taulab flourished both in the Jāhiliya and in Islam. He also narrated: Al-Farazdaq once said to his wife, Nawār: How does my verse compare with that of Jarīr? She answered: He equalled you in the sweet, and conquered you in the bitter. Al-Aṣma'ī said further: I heard Abū Sufyān ibn al-'Alā' say that he once asked of Ru'ba: What do you think of the rajaz-poetry of Abū 'n-Najm? (fol. 11) He replied:

1) The text seems to be defective here, and I have left a passage untranslated.

2) See the note on the text.

I heard this from al-Aṣma'ī: Umayya ibn Abū Ḥ-Ṣalt was supreme and unapproached in poetry (fol. 9) which had for its subject the world to come; 'Antara, where the subject was war; and 'Umar ibn Abū Rabī'a, where the subject was women.

5 According to al-Aṣma'ī, some one once met Kutayyir, the lover of 'Azza (this was Kutayyir ibn 'Abd ar-Rahmān, al-Huzā'i, Ibn Abū Jum'a), and said to him: O Abū Ṣahr, who was the greatest poet? He answered: The one who said:

I count my night ride better than a night with one free-born,
10 Slender of waist, most beautiful where stripped of clothing.

Now this was a verse of al-Ḥuṭai'a's¹). Thereupon he left him for a while, until he thought he had forgotten the incident; then he met him again, and said: O Abū Ṣahr, who was the greatest poet? He answered: The one who said:

15 Stand, let us weep at the remembrance of a beloved one and her abode; meaning Imrūlqais, who was the first of the poets to depict weeping over deserted dwelling-places and the journeying of the howdas.

Said al-Aṣma'ī: The best at describing riding-camels was 20 'Uyaina ibn Mirdās (the one who was called Ibn Faswa²); for description of milch-camels, the best in the qaṣīda form was ar-Rā'i, and in rajaz verse Ibn Laja' at-Taimī (whose name was 'Umar). Said al-Aṣma'ī: What tribe or company of men ranked highest in the poetry it produced? Some say, The large-eyed ones in the 25 shady palm-gardens, meaning the Anṣār; others say, The blue-eyed ones at the root of the thorn-bushes, meaning the Banī Qais ibn Ta'labā; and he mentioned of their number al-Muraqqiṣ, al-A'ṣā, and al-Musayyab ibn 'Alas. Said al-Aṣma'ī: I heard the following 30 verses by 'Amr ibn al-'Aṣī, and said: He is no poet, but a man of sharp wit. Said al-Aṣma'ī: Al-Aḥṭal was asked about the poetry of Kutayyir, and replied: A Hijāzite, who fastens the cloak firmly³). Al-Aṣma'ī once said: Do you know that Lailā was a better poet than al-Ḥansā'? And he said to me on another occasion: Az-
35 Zibriqān was a poet-knight (فارس شاعر) who did not make a long story; Mālik ibn Nuwaira, on the other hand, was a poet-knight who did make a long story. No tribe in the world, he said, was less productive of poetry, in proportion to its number, than the Banī Ṣaibān and Kalb. In the latter tribe there was not a single

1) The same story in different form, and on other authority, in Agh. II, 61. See also the anecdote there, at the bottom of the page.

3) What the phrase (بيكد البورد) means here, I do not know. It evidently puzzled Landberg also; see the note on the text.

'Ḥiṭam of the Wind"). Ibn Mufarrigh was one of the *muwallads*¹⁾ of Baṣra. Al-Aṣma'ī narrates that he heard the following from Wahb ibn Jarīr ibn Hāzim. My father once said to me: I was wont to recite three hundred qaṣida's of Umayya. I asked: Where is the collection now? He replied: Such-a-one borrowed it and carried it off.

Said al-Aṣma'ī: It used to be said that the best of all the poets were "the Vanquished of Muḍar", namely Ḥumaid, ar-Rā'ī, and Ibn Muqbil²⁾. As for ar-Rā'ī, he was vanquished by Jarīr, and also by Ḥanzar, one of the Banī Bakr. Lailā of Aḥyal overcame al-Ja'dī, and so also did Sawwār [ibn Aufā] ibn al-Ḥayā³⁾. Ibn Muqbil was beaten by an-Najāšī, one of the Banī 'l-Ḥarīṭ ibn Ka'b⁴⁾. As for Ḥumaid, every one who attacked him vanquished him. Ibn Aḥmar⁵⁾ (said he) did not satirise any one. Fuṣḥum⁶⁾ was mentioned by him as a notable poet of the Jāhiliya, but he did not give his lineage. He said of an-Najāšī ibn al-Ḥarīṭiya: He was guilty of wine-drinking, and 'Alī ibn Abū Ṭalīb punished him by beating with a hundred stripes; eighty for drunkenness, and twenty for violating Ramaḍān (for he had found him drunk in the sacred month). So when he had been beaten, he went away to Mu'āwiya, and composed verse in praise of him, and vituperated 'Alī⁷⁾.

Said al-Aṣma'ī: [Zuhair] became intimate with certain Jews, and learned from them about the resurrection. Therefore he said in his qaṣida:

Either it is postponed, put down in a book, and stored
For the Day of Account; or else 'tis hastened, and soon avenged.

Said al-Aṣma'ī: A learned ṣāliḥ was asked about the poets, and replied: In the time before Muḥammad, poetry flourished first in Rabī'a; then it went over to Tamīm. I said to al-Aṣma'ī: Why did he not mention Yemen? He replied: He was only speaking of the Banī Nizār; as for these, they all learned the poetic art from Imrulqais, the chief of the poets; Yemen was the home of poetry. And he said: Are there any in the world equal to the knights of Qais? their poets were indeed the fursān. Then he mentioned a number, among them 'Antara, Ḥufāf ibn Nadba, 'Abbās ibn Mirdās, and Duraid ibn aṣ-Ṣimma. On another occasion he said to me: Duraid and Ḥufāf were the best poets of the *fursān*⁸⁾.

1) Arabs by adoption, not of pure blood. Generally meaning one born of a slave mother.

2) The name of Nābigha Ja'dī seems to be accidentally omitted here; see just below.

3) Agh. IV, 131, 6 from bottom, 132f.

4) Kāmil 187, 6.

5) ī. e. 'Amr ibn Aḥmar al-Bāhili, another of the poets of Muḍar.

6) So pointed in Ms. I have found no other mention of him.

7) See the note on the text.

8) Cf. the similar estimate given above, and see the Introduction.

Said Abū Ḥātim: I asked al-Aṣma'ī about al-Quḥaif al-Āmirī — who made verses about women — and he said: His diction is neither classically elegant nor normative¹). Upon my asking him about Ziyād al-A'jam, he said: He is normative; no solecism has been attached to him; and his kunya was Abū Umāna. I said: Tell me about the slave of the Banī 'l-Ḥaṣḥās²). He replied: His verse was classically elegant, though he was a negro. Abū Dulāma was also a slave, I think he was the adopted son of an Abyssinian. I asked: Was his poetry classically chaste? He replied: It was of good quality in this regard. Moreover, Abū 'Aṭā' as-Sindī was a slave whose ear was pierced. Was he then one of the genuine Arabs?, I queried. No, but his diction was chaste. 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn Marwān once said to Aiman ibn Ḥuraim of Asad: What do you think of my maulā? meaning Nuṣaib. Aiman answered: He is a better poet than any other man of his skin (for he was a negro)³). Furthermore, 'Umar ibn Abū Rabī'a was the son of a slave mother, yet his poetry was considered normative; I have heard Abū 'Amr ibn al-'Alā' cite it as proof of correct grammatical usage, and formally declare it to be such. Also Faḍāla ibn Šarīk of Asad, and 'Abdallāh ibn az-Zubair of the same tribe, and Ibn ar-Ruqayyāt⁴), these all were sons of slave parents, yet their verse is normative. I saw, however, that he disparaged al-Uqaišir, and did not feel inclined toward his poetry; he said of him: He was only the "policeman" poet. Yes, I answered, it was al-Uqaišir who said:

25 You see, he 's drinking at our own expense!

So ask the policeman, Wherefore all this wrath?⁵)

He was slave-born, al-Aṣma'ī continued. Ibn Harma was both reliable and elegant in his compositions; Ibn Uḍaina was reliable, and in the same class (طبقة) as Ibn Harma, but was inferior to him in his poetry⁶). Mālik cited traditions on his authority, in his jurisprudence. Ṭufail of Kināna is also to be classed with Ibn Harma. Yazīd ibn Ḍabba was a maulā of the tribe Ṭaqīf. He composed a thousand qaṣida's, but the Arabs divided them up and carried them off.

35 Al-Aṣma'ī said, moreover: After Ru'ba and Abū Nuḥaila (fol. 8) there were no poets more worthy of the name than Jandal aṭ-Ṭuhawī and Abū Ṭauq and Ḥiṭām al-Mujašī'ī (who was nicknamed

1) More exactly: to be used as proof (دليل) of correct usage.

2) i. e. Suḥaim.

3) The whole anecdote is given in Agh. I, 131.

4) i. e. 'Ubaidallāh ibn Qais ar-Ruqayyāt.

5) The story of al-Uqaišir's adventure with the policeman is told in Agh. X, 87 f., 91. According to the latter passage, the officer of the law, who had come to arrest al-Uqaišir for drunkenness, was himself made tipsy by wine which the poet supplied to him by means of a tube passed through the key-hole of the barricaded door.

6) Cf. Agh. IV, 113, 2 f.

I asked him about Ḥidāš ibn Zuhair al-Āmirī, and he replied: He is a fahl.

Ka'b ibn Zuhair ibn Abū Sulmā?

Not a fahl.

Zaid al-Ḥail aṭ-Ṭā'ī?

One of the fursān.

Sulaik ibn as-Sulakā?

Not one of the fuḥūl, nor was he one of the fursān. He belonged to the number of those who used to make forays, running on their own feet and taking plunder. Another of the same sort 10 was Ibn Barrāqa of Hamdān¹⁾, and still others were Ḥājjiz²⁾ aṭ-Ṭumālī, of the *Sarwiyyūn*³⁾, and Ta'abbāṭa Šarran (whose name was Ṭābit ibn Jābir), and aš-Šanfarā al-Azdī, the Sarwī. Al-Muntašir was not of their number, but al-A'lam of Ḥudail belonged to them. Some of them dwelt in the Ḥijāz, and in the Sarāt there 15 were more than thirty (i. e., those who used to run on their own feet and take plunder).

He also said: If Salāma ibn Jandal had accomplished somewhat more, he would have been a fahl. Al-Mutalammis is the chief fahl of Rabī'a. Duraid ibn aš-Šimma is one of the fuḥūl among 20 the fursān. Moreover, Duraid in some of his poetry surpasses Nābigha of Dubyān in the art; he did, indeed, come near to vanquishing the Dubyāni.

I said: How about A'šā of Bahila, is he one of the fuḥūl?

He answered: Yes, and there is an elegy of his which has 25 not its equal in the world, namely:

There has come to me a report, at which I am not rejoiced,
From the height; a report in which there is neither lie nor mockery.

... (fol. 7) He proceeded⁴⁾: Al-'Ajjāj was born in the Jāhi- 30 liya. Ḥumaid al-Arqaṭ used to prune and polish and purify the rajaz poetry. I saw that he (al-Aṣma'ī) pronounced some of Abū n-Najm's rajaz verse good, and some of it defective, for he composed much that was bad. On one occasion he said: I am not much impressed with a poet whose name is al-Faḍl ibn Qudāma 35 (meaning Abū n-Najm).

1) Kāmil 152, 19, Yāqūt III, 300.

2) Cf. Agh. XII, 49 below.

3) Those whose home was in the Sarāt, a mountainous district of Tihāma bordering on Yemen, whose inhabitants were noted for purity of speech (Yāqūt III, 66 f.: قال أبو عمرو بن العلاء أفصحُ الناس أهل السروات). See just below, also Yāqūt III, 65 ff. (p. 65 line 8, for أرمينية read أليمن?), Hamdāni ed. Müller, pp. 48 f., 67 ff.

Fahl.

Abū Hiraš of Hudail?

Fahl.

Ašā of Hamdān?

5 He is one of the fuḥūl, though of Islam, and the author of much poetry¹).

I asked al-Aṣma'ī about Ka'b ibn Sa'd al-Ghanawī; and he answered: He is not one of the fuḥūl, except in his elegies: in that particular no other has equalled him. He added: He used to 10 be called "the Ka'b of the Proverbs".

I asked him also about Ḥufāf ibn Nadba. and 'Antara, and az-Zibriqān ibn Badr; and he replied: These are the best poets of the *fursān*²); and in the same rank with them is 'Abbās ibn Mirdās of Sulaim (he did not say that they were of the fuḥūl), and Bišr 15 ibn Abū Ḥāzim. I heard Abū 'Amr ibn al-'Alā' say: His (Bišr's) qaṣida rhyming in the letter r brought him into the company of the fuḥūl:

Ah, the horde has departed, without drawing near,
And thy heart, borrowed from thee, is in their howdas.

20 (Saīd Abū Ḥatim) I proceeded: What of al-Aswad ibn Ya'fur an-Nahšali?

He replied: He resembles (نَهْشَلِي) the fuḥūl.

Then as to 'Amr ibn Sa's al-Asadī, what do you say regarding him? (fol. 6).

25 He is not a fahl, but is below that rank.

And Labīd ibn Rabī'a?

No fahl. Moreover, on another occasion al-Aṣma'ī described Labīd to me as "a good man" — as though he intended to deny to him any high merit as a poet. And he once said to me:
30 Labīd's poetry is like a mantle from Ṭabaristān; meaning that it was well woven, but without elegance.

He said also: Jarāda ibn 'Umāila al-'Anazī composed some poems which resemble those of the fuḥūl, but they are short. This verse is one of his:

35 How wert thou led aright, when thou hadst no guide?
There are those who witness against thee what thou didst.

What of Aus ibn Ghalfā' al-Ḥujaimī?

If he had composed twenty qaṣida's, he would have joined the fuḥūl; but he is cut short of it.

40 He also said to me: 'Umaira ibn Ṭariq al-Yarbū'ī was one of the chiefs of the fursān; he it was who took captive Qābūs ibn al-Mundir³).

1) See the Introduction.

2) See the Introduction, and cf. Agh. XVI, 139, where Ibn Sallām's ranking of Ḥufāf in the "fifth class" of the fursān is mentioned.

3) Namely, at Ṭihfa. Bekrī 452, Yāqūt III, 519.

before al-Aḥṭal or after him, do not believe him. Then he said: Abū 'Amr ibn al-'Alā' also used to prefer him (to the other two); I have heard him say: If al-Aḥṭal had lived but one single day in the Jāhiliya, I would not give any poet, jāhili or islāmī, the precedence over him¹). Said al-Aṣma'ī: I once recited to Abū 'Amr 5 ibn al-'Alā' a certain poem, and he said: No one of the Islamic poets could equal this, not even al-Aḥṭal.

Said Abū Ḥātim: I also asked him about al-Aghlab, whether he was a fahl, among the rajaz poets; and he said: He is not a fahl nor even successful, and his verse wearies me. And on another 10 occasion he said to me: I only hand down from al-Aghlab two poems and a half. I said: What do you mean by the 'half'? He replied: I know two poems of his, and I used to hand down half of the one which rhymes in qāf — for they have lengthened it. And he continued: His children were wont to add to his poems, 15 until they spoiled them. Said Abū Ḥātim: Ishāq ibn al-'Abbās²) asked from him a rajaz verse of al-Aghlab, and he sought from me³) I loaned him he brought forth about twenty (poems). (fol. 5) I said: Did you not declare that you knew only two and a half? He answered me: Yes, but I have sorted those 20 which I know, and so far as they are not his, they belong at least to others who are classically valid and trustworthy. Said Abū Ḥātim: No other man could recite so many rajaz verses as al-Aṣma'ī. I once heard a man of Najrān who had travelled about in the regions of Khorasān question him, saying: Such-a-one in 25 Rai told me that you could recite twelve thousand rajaz poems. Yes, he answered, there are fourteen thousand rajaz poems which I hold in my memory. I was amazed at this, but he said to me: Most of them are short. I said: Deliver them, verse by verse, fourteen thousand verses. But he answered: Only the poetry of 30 al-Aghlab makes the task too tiresome for me. (Said Ḥalaf: One of the sons of al-Aghlab was a man who was trustworthy in the matter of tradition and narrative, but lied about his father's poetry.)

I proceeded: What of Ḥātim aṭ-Ṭā'ī?

Ḥātim, he answered, is only counted as "noble" (يَعَدُّ بِكْرَمٍ); 35 he did not say that he was a fahl.

And Mu'aqqir al-Bāriqī, the ḥalīf of the Banī Numair?

If he had completed five or six qaṣīda's, he would have been a fahl. Then he added: The two tribes least productive of poetry seem to have been Kalb and Saibān. 40

Abū Du'aib of Huḍail?

Fahl.

Sā'ida ibn Ju'ayya⁴)?

1) The same in Agh. VII, 172, 8.

2) The governor of Baṣra.

3) The text is defective here.

4) This well known poet does not receive mention in Agh., if the Index is to be trusted.

If he had composed five qaṣīda's like the one which we have, he would have been a fahl.

And al-Muhalhil?

No fahl; but if he had produced other poems like that one 5 of his:

O night of ours in Dū Juṣam, turn to daylight!

he would have been the foremost fahl of them all. Besides, the most of his poetry is merely attributed to him.

Abū Du'ād?

10 Excellent¹⁾. (He did not say that he was a fahl.)

Ar-Rā'ī?

Not a fahl.

Ibn Muqbil?

Not a fahl.

15 Said Abū Ḥātim: I also asked al-Aṣma'ī which of the two was the greater poet, ar-Rā'ī or Ibn Muqbil. He replied: How near to each other they stand! But, I objected, this answer does not satisfy us. Thereupon he said: The verse of ar-Rā'ī was more like that of the old and primitive poets.

20 Ibn Aḥmar (fol. 4) al-Bāhili?

Not a fahl; yet, though inferior to those, he stands at the head of his own division. And (he said) in my opinion (ج) (س) (ل) Mālik ibn Ḥarīm al-Hamdānī is of the fuḥūl. If Ta'laba ibn Ṣu'air al-Māzinī had written five poems like his qaṣīda, he would have 25 been a fahl.

How about Ka'b ibn Ju'ail?

I think that he (ك) (ب) (ع) is of the fuḥūl, but do not feel certain of it.

What do you say of Jarīr and al-Farazdaq and al-Aḥṭal?

30 These, if they belonged to the Jāhiliya, would have a distinguished place (in this ranking); but since they belong to Islām, I will say nothing about them.

Said Abū Ḥātim: I had often heard him prefer Jarīr to al-Farazdaq; so I said to him, on the day when 'Iṣām ibn al-Faiḍ 35 came to see him: I wish to ask you about something, and if 'Iṣām had already heard it from you, I would not ask. I have heard you prefer Jarīr to al-Farazdaq, more than once; what will you say now about the two, and about al-Aḥṭal? So he reflected for a moment, and then recited a verse from his (al-Aḥṭal's) qaṣīda:

40 Verily I have made the night's journey of no weakling,

On a she-camel emaciated of cheek and thin of flank.

Then he recited about ten verses more, and said: If any one tells you that any man on earth ever produced the equal of this, either

Al-Ḥarīṭ ibn Ḥilliza?

Fahl.

'Amr ibn Kultūm?

No fahl.

Al-Musayyab ibn 'Alas? 5

Fahl.

How about 'Adī ibn Zaid; is he a fahl?

Neither stallion nor mare!

(Said Abū Ḥātim: The only reason why I asked him was 10 because I had heard Ibn Munādir¹⁾ say that no poet should be ranked higher than 'Adī.)

What of Ḥassān ibn Tābit?

He is a fahl.

Qais ibn al-Ḥaṭīm? 15

Fahl.

The two named al-Muraqqiṣ?

Each of the two is a fahl.

And Ibn Qamī'a?

Fahl. (This was Qamī'a [ibn Darīḥ]²⁾ ibn Sa'd ibn Mālik, 20 and his kunya was Abū Yazid³⁾).

And Abū Zubaid?⁴⁾

He is no fahl.

Aš-Šammāḥ?

Fahl. (And al-Aṣma'ī added: I have talked with a man who 25 had seen the grave of aš-Šammāḥ in Armenia.)

How about Muzarrid, his brother?

He was not inferior to aš-Šammāḥ, yet he injured his poetry by introducing too much satire.

Now al-Aṣma'ī had told me, before this, that the men of Kūfa 30 were wont to place al-A'šā in the very first rank of poets⁵⁾; also. Ḥalaf⁶⁾ was accustomed to say that no poet should be ranked above him. (Said Abū Ḥātim: This was because he composed poetry in every sort of meter, and used every variety of rhyme.)

I proceeded: What of 'Urwa ibn al-Ward? 35

He answered: He was a noble poet (شاعر كريم), but not a fahl.

How about al-Ḥuwaidira?

1) Muḥammad ibn Munādir (often Manādir), Agh. XVII, 9 ff.

2) Agh. XVI, 163.

3) There was another Ibn Qamī'a of some note, namely he who killed Mus'ab ibn 'Umsir at the battle of Uḥud, mistaking him for the Prophet Muḥammad (Hiš. 566 f., Agh. XIV, 19). This Qamī'a was of the Laṭī tribe.

4) Ḥarmala ibn al-Mundir aṭ-Ta'ī.

5) Apparently, the original context of this passage is to be found above, where al-A'šā was mentioned; see also the note on the text.

6) Cf. Agh. VIII, 78, where al-A'šā is under discussion, and Ḥalaf al-Aḥmar refuses to decide the question of superiority.

They are compelled to have the sharp bit of the bridle put on,
As if it were put on the trunk of a palm that is stripped of its bark¹).

(You say: I constrained him (rāwadtuhū) to this or that, meaning 5 the same as hāwaltuhū, and one may say also aradtuhu. Here he is describing the neck of the animal)

. . . . and he [i. e. an-Nābigha al-Ja'dī] was most excellent in describing horses²). Thereupon he recited:

10 Holding firm the sutures of the skull, or he had been ready to neigh³).

He also excelled in that qaṣīda of his in which he says:

Those 'generous gifts' of yours — not even two cups of milk,
Which were made gray with water, and at last turned to urine.

15 (Said Abū Ḥātim) I asked: What was his intent in that, for this line enters into the verse of another poet⁴). He replied: When Sawwār [ibn Aufā] ibn al-Ḥayā' al-Quṣairī said: 'We have among us him who searched for his foot⁵), him who made Ḥājib his captive, and those who gave the milk to drink', an-Nābigha there-20 upon composed the verse: (fol. 3)

Those generous gifts of yours — not even two cups of milk.

Said al-Aṣma'ī: If this qaṣīda had only been written by the older Nābigha, it would have reached the utmost bound of merit.

I then asked him: How about al-A'šā, the A'šā of the Banī 25 Qais ibn Ta'laba?

He replied: He is not a *fahl*⁶).

And 'Alqama ibn 'Abada?

1) See Krenkow, loc. cit., p. 870.

2) On the lacuna here, see the note on the text.

3) It is perhaps useless to attempt to translate without knowing the context. On the شُرُورِ of a horse, see Ibn Sīda's Kitāb al-Muḥaṣṣaṣ VI, 138, and on أَرَا لِيْبِزْرًا see Jamhara, 147, lines 4f.

4) See Brockelmann, loc. cit., p. 118, where the story of the verse is told, and the original author is said to have been Abū 's-Ṣalt ibn ar-Rabī'a at-Taqaḥfi.

5) Namely Ḥubāš ibn Qais, whose foot was cut off in the battle of the Yarmūk, while he was showing great valor; see especially Belāduri 137, where the verse is given:

وَمِنَّا ابْنُ عَتَابٍ وَنَاشِدٌ رَجُلِهِ وَمِنَّا اَنْدَى اَدَى اَلِى الْحَتَى حَاجِبًا

The Ḥājib who was made captive was Ḥājib ibn Zurāra. The story of his capture by Mālik ibn Salama (known as Dū 'r-Ruqaiba) is told in Agh. X, 42f.

6) This judgment is all the more remarkable in view of the high esteem in which Abū 'Amr held al-A'šā (Agh. VIII, 78, etc.). On the probable dis-arrangement of the Ms. at this point, see below.

the comparison of the two¹⁾ . . . He answered: No; Abū 'Amr²⁾, when some one asked him, in my hearing: Was an-Nābigha, or Zuhair, the greater poet? replied: Zuhair was not worthy to be an-Nābigha's hireling. He (al-Aṣma'i) added: Aus ibn Ḥajar was a greater poet than Zuhair, but an-Nābigha took away from him 5 some of his glory³⁾. Aus composed this:

With an army for which you see the field too strait, in a poem of his; but an-Nābigha followed it with some lines of his own, bringing its conceit, and something besides, into a single half-verse: (fol. 2) 10

An army, for which the field becomes too strait,
Leaving the ridges behind as though they were plains⁴⁾.

Abū Ḥātim also reported from al-Aṣma'i the following: A ṣāḥib of the people of Najd said that Ṭufail al-Ghanawī used to be called *Muḥabbir*⁵⁾, in the pre-Islamic time, because of the beauty 15 of his verse. And in my own opinion, said al-Aṣma'i, in some of his poetry he surpassed Imrulqais; al-Aṣma'i says it. Then he added: And yet Ṭufail borrowed something from Imrulqais; moreover, it is said that much of the poetry of Imrulqais belonged to certain beggars⁶⁾ who attached themselves to him; also, 'Amr ibn 20 Qamī'a went in his company to the Byzantine court⁷⁾. Mu'awiya ibn Abū Sufyān used to say: Summon for me Ṭufail, for his verse is more like that of the ancient poets than is the verse of Zuhair, and he is a *fahl*⁸⁾. Al-Aṣma'i proceeded: It is a wonder that an-Nābigha never gave any description of a mare except in the 25 one verse:

With her nostrils yellow from [the blossoms of] the jarjār plant.

Indeed, an-Nābigha, Aus, and Zuhair were not wont to give fine descriptions of horses; but Ṭufail, on the contrary, reached the almost bound of excellence in this characterization, and he was a 30 fahl. Then he recited these lines of his:

4) That is, they were trampled flat by the multitude of the army.

5) Literally, one who adorns. See especially Goldziher's discussion of the uses of this term, Abhandlungen, I, 129—131.

6) "Poor devils", صعاليك.

7) Agh. XVI, 163, 166 above, and elsewhere.

8) The question of al-Aṣma'i's dating of the poet Ṭufail (see Krenkow, JRAS. 1907, pp. 815, 820) is here settled. The original meaning of the statements quoted by Krenkow from Agh. XIV, 88 must have been simply this, that Ṭufail was older than Nābigha Ja'dī (with whom he is all the time being compared), and the foremost (أقدم) of the poets of Qais 'Ailān.

Translation.

Al-Aṣma'ī's Ranking of the Earliest Arabian Poets.

Abū Bakr Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥasan ibn Duraid al-Azdī reports the following from Abu Ḥātim Sahl ibn Muḥammad ibn 'Utmān 5 as-Sijzī. Said Abū Ḥātim: On more than one occasion I heard al-Aṣma'ī 'Abd al-Malik ibn Quraib pronounce an-Nābigha of Dubyān superior to the other pre-Mohammedan poets. I myself also asked him — and it was the last question that I put to him, only a short time before his death — Who stands first among the Fuḥūl? 10 He replied: an-Nābigha of Dubyān; but added: In my opinion, no one ever equalled the verses of Imrulqais:

Their good fortune guarded them through their kinsfolk —
It is on the less fortunate that vengeance falls!

Said Abū Ḥātim: When he saw that I was writing down what 15 he said, he reflected for a moment and then proceeded: No, the first of them all in excellence is Imrulqais; his were the highest honor and the precedence, and they all drew upon his poetry and followed his canons; I could almost say that he gave an-Nābigha of Dubyān his place among the fuḥūl. Then I asked (said Abū 20 Ḥātim): What is the meaning of the term fahl?¹⁾ He replied: It means that one has a marked superiority over his fellows, like the superiority of a thoroughbred stallion over the mere colts; and he added: it is the same thing which is meant by the verse of Jarīr:

25 The young offspring of the milch-camel, when he is fastened with the yoke-robe,
Can not withstand the fierce attack of the seasoned and mighty ones²⁾.

Said Abū Ḥātim: Some one asked him, Who of all men is 30 the greatest poet? He answered, an-Nābigha. The other continued: Do you give no one the precedence over him? He replied: No, nor were the men of learning in poetry whom I have known accustomed to prefer any one to him. But, I said, there has been some difference of opinion in regard to Zuhair ibn Abū Sulmā and

1) Of course such a slightly different use of the term as that illustrated by the title Alqama al-Fahl (on its origin, see Agh. XXI, 173) would suggest itself; cf. also the definition given in the Lisān: فُحُولُ الشُّعْرَاءِ هُمُ الَّذِينَ غَلَبُوا بِالْهَجَاءِ مَنْ هَاجَاهُمْ مِثْلَ جَرِيرٍ وَالْفَرَزْدَقِ وَاشْبَاعِهِمَا وَكَذَلِكَ كَلَّ مِنْ عَارِضٍ شَاعِرًا فَغَلَبَ عَلَيْهِ.

2) More exactly: the ibn labūn is a camel entering upon his third year; the būzil (plur. buzul) is eight or nine years old.

in a passage which is not found in our text of the work, though it might perhaps have stood there originally. I print in square brackets the portion which is wanting in the Landberg manuscript.

اخبرني محمد بن الحسن بن دريد قال حدثنا ابو حاتم قال سألت
5 الاصمعي عن اعشى همدان فقال هو من الفحول وهو اسلامي كثير
الشعر ثم قال نبي العجب من ابن داب حين يزعم ان اعشى
همدان قال

مَنْ دَعَا نِي غَزِيلِي اَرْبَحَ اللهُ تِجَارَتَهُ

ثم قال سبحانه الله أمثل هذا يجوز على الاعشى ان يجزمه اسم
10 الله عز وجل ويرفع تجارته وهو نصب ثم قال لي خلف الاحمر
والله لقد طمع ابن داب في الخلافة حين ضن ان هذا يقبل منه
وان له من لحد مثل ان يجوز مثل هذا ثم قال ومع ذلك ايضا
ان قوله * من دعا لي غزيلي * لا يجوز انما هو * من دعا لغزيلي *
Ibn Duraid reports from Abū Ḥatim: I asked al-Aṣma'ī about A'sā Hamdān, and he said: He is one of 15 the fuḥūl, though of Islām, and the author of much poetry. [He (al-Aṣma'ī) continued: One can only wonder at Ibn Da'b when he asserts that A'sā Hamdān was the author of this:

*Man da'a li ghuzayyili Arabah allah tijaratuh*¹⁾.

God forbid that this sort of thing should be allowed to pass 20 as perpetrated by al-A'sā, that he should pronounce the word
"Allah" with the sukān, and put "tijaratuh" in the nominative when it should be in the accusative! Thereupon Ḥalaf al-Aḥmar said to me: Verily, Ibn Da'b must have been aspiring to the caliphate when he imagined that this would be accepted from him, and that 25 his place was so high that such an assertion as this could pass.
Then he added: Moreover, even the first half-verse, man da'a li ghuzayyili, is not permissible; it can only be, man da'a li ghuzayyili, as one says, man da'a liba'irin dallin"²⁾].

In the text which follows, the Landberg manuscript is faith- 30 fully reproduced, except in a very few cases where good reason for deviation is given in the notes at the foot of the page. The vowel-pointing is usually that of the ms. itself.

1) That is: Whoever calls for me my little gazelle, may God make his trading profitable.

2) That is: Who summons (its owner) to a straying beast (which has been found); cf. Lisān XVIII, 285 (above), etc.

other words. His use of the designation fursān is another illustration of the fact that he is not concerned with the terminology of a thoroughgoing literary classification. He speaks of these Arab "knights" of old as we might speak of the knights of the middle 5 ages, or of the Troubadours. They were invested with an atmosphere of nobility and chivalry, and men like al-Aṣma'ī spoke of them with an enthusiasm which was only in part based on approval of their poetical achievements. "Those who made predatory excursions on foot" form another class, a less distinguished group than 10 that of the "knights", numbering such men as Ta'abbata Ṣarran and aṣ-Šanfarā; and here again the classification was not primarily concerned with rank in the art of poetry. Thus it appears, for instance, that the two classes, fahl and fursān, are not mutually exclusive. Duraid ibn aṣ-Ṣimma is mentioned as belonging to both 15 groups (دريد بن الصمة من فحول القيسية), and the same possibility is implied in other passages.

It is obvious, from all this, that al-Aṣma'ī's fuḥūlat as-Šu'ara' could not serve as the basis for subsequent systematic essays on the rank of the poets. It was both too indefinite and too arbitrary, 20 besides seeming to put too many poets in the very foremost rank. It was not of any great use to later writers to have this unwieldy classification into fahl and no-fahl, where the opinions even of those best qualified to judge differed so widely, and the line between the two classes was often impossible to draw (as al-Aṣma'ī himself 25 confesses over and over again). If there was to be any ranking at all, it must be something better than this. Of course every scholar who undertook a thoroughgoing criticism of the Arab poets would be influenced by these judgments, and would usually either quote or adopt them to some extent; in a few cases, however, the 30 estimate was too obviously one-sided to find general approval, as when the two lesser A'šās, of Hamdān and Bāhila, are classed among the fuḥūl, while the great A'šā is left out. The importance of the compilation is simply that of the "table talk" of a noted scholar, on a subject in which he was rightly regarded as a high 35 authority. We may all be grateful to Abū Ḥātim for having followed his master about with a note-book.

The text of the work, as we possess it in our unique manuscript, is in fairly good condition, though there are a few doubtful passages and one or two disturbing lacunae. So far as it is possible to 40 judge from internal evidence, the gaps are not extensive. It may be, moreover, that what we have is a somewhat abridged form of the original compilation; though this can only be called a possibility, not really made probable by the evidence. In one passage preserved in the Aghānī (V, 158), Ibn Duraid cites from Abū 45 Ḥātim, from al-Aṣma'ī, an opinion which is given in the same words in our فحول الشعراء, and then continues the citation the beginning of these "memoirs" is characteristic and significant. Abū Ḥātim had asked his master to name the foremost faḥl of all the poets, and the answer had been, Nābigha Dubyānī. "But", says Abū Ḥātim, "when he saw that I was writing down what he said, he reflected for a moment, and then proceeded: No, the first 5 of them all is Imrulqais", etc. In one place, in speaking of the "knights" of the pre-Muhammadan time, he says that Ḥufāf, 'Antara, and az-Zibriqān were the best poets of the fursān; but on another occasion he names Duraid and Ḥufāf as the best of the group. There are several other patent examples of inconsistency. An 10 anecdote which he tells here of the poet Kutayyir really serves to illustrate the off-hand manner in which many of his own judgments were expressed. Some one asked of Kutayyir who was the greatest poet, and received the answer, al-Ḥuṭai'a. The questioner then waited for some time, until he thought it likely that the poet 15 would have forgotten the incident, and then asked the same question again; this time receiving the answer, Imrulqais. For a considerable part of the material here collected by Abū Ḥātim, we cannot be confident that it gives us what al-Aṣma'ī himself would have written down as his final estimate, in a serious attempt to rank the Arab 20 poets. We can hardly doubt, on the other hand, that al-Aṣma'ī has been faithfully reported by his pupil; the question of the substantial genuineness of the compilation can hardly arise.

The scientific value of the treatise, as a specimen of literary criticism, is small. It is quite plain that the great philologist had 25 not made any careful study of the criteria according to which poets were to be excluded from, or admitted to, his faḥl class. It is also evident that he had no system of successive classes, in which he ranked those whom he would not reckon among the fuḥūl. In speaking of the poets who fell below the highest rank, 30 he used a variety of complimentary terms, more or less at haphazard, and without showing any purpose of making even a rough classification. Goldziher, in his above-mentioned essay, seems to me to go too far when he says (Abhandl. I, 187): "Al-Aṣma'ī hat sogar einen neuen Terminus festgestellt, durch welchen er, gleichsam in schonender Weise, hochberühmte Dichter der Gāhiliyya aus der 35 Ordnung der eigentlichen Klassiker entfernt, ohne damit ihren Werth völlig herabzusetzen. Er nennt diese Dichter zweiter Ordnung:

karīm, edel". Goldziher then cites the cases of Ḥātim (انما يُعدّ) and 40 (شاعر كريم وليس بفاحل) and 'Urwa (شاعر كريم وليس بفاحل) and 'Urwa (شاعر كريم وليس بفاحل). But 45 this, I think, reads into al-Aṣma'ī's words more than he intended. He had no thought of a definite second class, in which the term karam was used in the same way as fuḥūla. It was only by accident that he employed the adjective karīm in these cases; on another day, speaking of the same poets, he might have chosen at some length the work before us, the نحولة الشعراء of al-Aṣmaʿī, which he had been able to use while the manuscript was still in Landberg's possession. To his treatment of the subject the reader is accordingly referred. Again, Brockelmann in the Nöldeke-Festschrift, I, 109—125, has published a conspectus of one of the earliest and most important of the fuḥūla books, the طبقات الشعراء of Muḥammād ibn Sallām al-Jumāhī († 231), making use of all the surviving fragments of the work which he was able to collect. This is a systematic treatise on the ranking of the poets, and therefore altogether different from the compilation of Abū Ḥatīm, as will presently appear. Finally, we are promised a complete edition of this treatise of al-Jumāhī in the near future, by Professor Hell of Munich, who has found a manuscript containing it in the Khedivial Library in Cairo; see his announcement in the ZDMG. 64, p. 659, note.

As has just been said, the remarks on the poets made by al-Aṣmaʿī, and collected by Abū Ḥatīm as-Sijistānī under the title Kitāb Fuḥūlat as-Šuʿarāʾ, do not constitute anything like a systematic compilation. What we have is simply a catena of scattered sayings, of very uneven value, made on many different occasions, and thrown together without any plan of arrangement. Some of the judgments were given in answer to questions, while others (and these constitute the great majority) were the merest obiter dicta. The opinion expressed is in many cases confined to this one point, the fitness of the poet to bear the title fahl, that is, "thoroughbred male" (especially male camel), or "stallion", a truly Arabian way of picturing the embodiment of pure native blood, masculine force, and high spirit. The holder of this rank must have been, first of all, a poet of very noteworthy achievements; thus it is said of al-Ḥuwaidira, for example: "If he had produced five qaṣīdas like the one which we have, he would have been a fahl". But he must also have been a true representative of the genuine Arab stock at its best, embodying the qualities which were most characteristic of the free and vigorous life of the native clans, battling for their precarious existence on the edge of the desert. As Goldziher remarks (loc. cit., p. 135): "Nicht die dichterische Kraft allein macht den Menschen dieser Benennung würdig; diese bezieht sich vielmehr auch auf die Eigenschaften des ritterlichen Charakters". It is easy to see why the poets of the Islamic time were not easily given the title which seemed to belong by especial right to the primitive period and the Bedawī nobility. Al-Aṣmaʿī's estimates, both as to the fuḥūla quality and also on other matters concerning the old poets, while always interesting are frequently not convincing. Some are evidently the fruit of long deliberation; others are so carelessly made that we may suspect that al-Aṣmaʿī himself would have modified or even retracted them a few days later, when he was in another mood. One of the incidents narrated near

A brief treatise, purporting to contain al-Ašma'ī's detailed estimate of the pre-Mohammedan poets, has been known to exist in a single manuscript in Damascus. The attention of occidental scholars was first called to it by H. Lammens, in the Journal Asiatique, 1894, II, p. 155. The manuscript was copied for Count 5 Landberg while he was in the East, and the copy, which is now in the library of Yale University, as number 49 of the Landberg Collection purchased in 1900, furnishes the text which is here published. The original manuscript, which is said to be about 10 two hundred years old, contains also the Diwān of Muḥammad ibn az-Zayyāt († 233), Ta'lab's Qawā'id aš-Ši'r, and the Sajarat ad-Durr of 'Abd al-Wāhid ibn 'Alī († 351).

The form of the كُتُبُ فُحُولَةِ الشُّعْرَاءِ is that of a loose series of personal reminiscences. The narrator is al-Ašma'ī's favorite pupil Abū Ḥātim Sahl ibn Muḥammad as-Sijistāni, who reports 15 from his master, verbatim, whatever he had heard him say — either of his own accord or in answer to questions, at various times — as to the relative merits of the ancient poets. Abū Ḥātim's narrative is transmitted, finally, through his own pupil, the renowned scholar Ibn Duraid, who is thus responsible for the redaction which 20 lies before us.

The whole subject of fuhūla literature has been treated so often that there is no need of general discussion here. Nöldeke, in his Beiträge zur Kenntniss der Poesie der alten Araber, 1 ff., translated and commented upon the Introduction to a work of this 25 nature by Ibn Qutaiba; and much that is contained in that treatise may profitably be compared with this older compilation, unlike as the two are. Goldziher, in his Abhandlungen zur arabischen Philologie I, 122—174, has given us a characteristically thorough essay on "Alte und neue Poesie im Urteile der arabischen Kritiker", 30 in which he discusses the principal criteria on which the earliest Muhammadan critics based their estimates. Moreover, in pp. 134—143 he deals with the term fahl in particular, and characterizes
